

Clarisonic Opal

I walked into New York dermatologist Debra Jaliman's office to see a huddle of women crowding around the latest Clarisonic DIY skin-care device, which uses sonic technology to infuse anti-aging serum into your under-eye area. Jaliman and other derms have told me the machine plumps up fine lines and depuffs eyes for up to eight hours! It's becoming a must-have for celebs and TV anchors, and it's the perfect thing for you on those days when you have to pull yourself together after a sleepless night helping with homework or sick kids. Results are cumulative. If you use it daily, it feels fantastic—like a mini-facial. I'm completely addicted, and imagine Clarisonic mommy fans like Debra Messing, Madonna and Demi Moore will be just as enthralled when they get their hands on it. $245 at www.clarisonic.com.

RMS Living Luminizer

Famous makeup artist Rose-Marie Swift's natural highlighter is a hit with new mom Karolina Kurkova and Michelle Monaghan. You just dip your finger into it and apply anywhere you want a little three-dimensional highlight, like above your cheekbones, at your temples, on your brow-bones, on the bow of your lip, and at the inside corners of your eyes. It's the perk of pretty you need when you've spent a day thinking about everyone except yourself, Heaven. $38 at www.RMSbeauty.com.

Nars Illuminator

Finally! The long-awaited liquid version of Nars' pinky golden glow is here. I couldn't wait to get my hands on this stuff during last season's fashion week where it was a backstage staple—and it didn't surprise me to find out that star moms like Christina Aguilera and Julianna Margulies wore it during awards season. Use this pinky/gold/peachy fluid under your foundation for all-over radiance or spot-apply like a highlighter on your face and body. It's the antidote to tired, dull skin, no matter your skin-tone. $29 at Sephora.
